The Night Visitor
By Ellie Marchmont Senior Reporter

It was after midnight when Sergeant Kate Marshall left the police station in the centre of Bristol and drove home. As usual, on her way, she did some shopping at an all-night supermarket and when she got home it was almost one o'clock. She left the shopping in the kitchen and, as always, went upstairs to change out of her uniform. Suddenly she heard a noise from downstairs. "At first I thought it was my cat," she said, "but then I realised the cat was there on the bed. So I went downstairs very slowly and quietly. There was a fox in the kitchen! My shopping was all over the floor and it was eating a sausage. I was furious! I know people sometimes see foxes in their gardens at night but I had no idea foxes came into people's houses." She added, "It was my own fault. The kitchen window was open."

What do you know about Kate?

She lives in the centre of Bristol.

She goes to work by car. ✓

She never does her shopping late at night.

She hasn't got any pets.
