Hello Jen,

We had a letter this morning about your father's great aunt Maisie, who died a few days ago. We hardly knew her even though she lived quite close to us. She was a widow with no children and it turns out your father inherits everything because he was her nearest relative.

She wasn't wealthy, so there's not much money, but she did own her own house – a lovely old cottage (see the picture). It'll be perfect for you and David when you get married. I know you were looking for something in London, but you can get there from the cottage in less than an hour by train and, what's more, we live only a couple of miles away! What do you think? It can be our wedding present to you both.

Call me when you can.

Lots of love,

Mum

Find the true sentence.

- Maisie died last year.
- Marjorie had an aunt called Maisie.
- Jennifer's father had a great aunt. ✓
- Marjorie's husband is dead.
