Hello,

I am replying to the advertisement on your website for part-time delivery riders, and I hope you will consider my application.

The ad says no experience needed, but I worked for Gino's Pizza Palace just across the road from you for a couple of months last summer, serving and doing deliveries, so I know what it's all about. In fact, Gino asked me to stay on, but he's not an easy man to get on with and his pizzas aren't that great. Yours are awesome.

I understand you pay by the number of deliveries and not by the hour, but are the hours flexible, and is there a minimum age? I'm just 17 and still at school, so I can only work evenings, weekends and during the holidays. And my parents want me always to be home by 10.00 pm. Is that a problem?

I look forward to hearing back from you. I'm attaching a photo as requested in the ad.

Thanking you in advance,

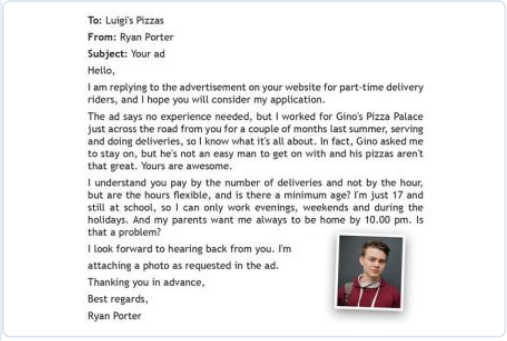

Best regards,

Ryan Porter

We know from Ryan's email that Luigi ..... .

- needs riders who can work part-time ✓
- pays his riders more than Gino does
- wants riders who can work every day
- doesn't have any delivery riders

"A vampire? But you can't possibly believe that!" exclaimed Mark.
"I know what I saw, Mark! I'm not delusional," said Lucy. She continued packing her suitcase. "We need to get out of here, and quickly."
"The roads must be completely blocked by snow now. We barely managed to drive through the blizzard ourselves this afternoon. It's hopeless."
"Then we find someone else and tell them. There's safety in numbers."
"Who?" asked Mark, exasperated. "I haven't seen a single other guest, or another member of hotel staff since we checked in."
"I'd call the police but we're so deep in the countryside there's no signal."
"They'd probably think it was a prank," replied Mark.
"If only we hadn't lost our way, we'd be in our rented cottage instead of this crumbling old hotel in the middle of nowhere," said Lucy bitterly.
"Look, Lucy, are you absolutely sure about what you saw?" asked Mark.
"For heaven's sake, yes! I've already told you: I couldn't get the shower to work, so I asked Mr Price to come up and take a look at it. He didn't want me in the bathroom with him, which was strange, but I peeked in through the half-open door. He was right in front of the big mirror over the wash basin, but there was no reflection in the mirror!"
