I often shop at Wilsons' because I don't like supermarkets.

Kevin Canter
The problem is that the Wilsons don't sell fruit and vegetables and there are only two other shops in Rosperton – the baker's and the butcher's. There's a supermarket two miles away in York but I haven't got a car and there's only one bus every hour.

Vera Hope
My family lives in Rosperton and we buy our bread from the baker's, but we never shop at Wilsons' because it's too expensive. It only takes 10 minutes to drive to the supermarket and it's easy to park.

Different by G. H. Malleon

At the age of 13, Mark Fry is sure that he's different from other children, but, to everyone who knows him, there's nothing extraordinary about him.

He lives in Whitby, near the sea, in a three-bedroomed house that's the same as the other houses in the street, with his parents, a hamster and a dog called Tam. His father works in a local bank, his mother's a nurse and his sister — a journalist — now lives in London, where she shares a flat with another girl.

So why does he think he's different? He laughs at the same things as his friends, he likes the same games... But, at school, he sometimes knows things before he reads about them. This frightens him, and he never talks about it with his friends or his parents.

Then one winter evening, he takes Tam for a walk on the beach. There's no one there except a strange little girl with silver hair who says, "Hello Mark. You don't know me, but I know you."

Mark is frightened because he never plays football with his friends

people think he's different

he knows things that his friends don't know ✓

he can't tell his parents about his problems
