A mistake that made a million

Pattie Barnes (18) is one of about a dozen teenage millionaires in Britain. Pattie makes her money from her chocolate cookies. You can buy them in supermarkets in Britain.

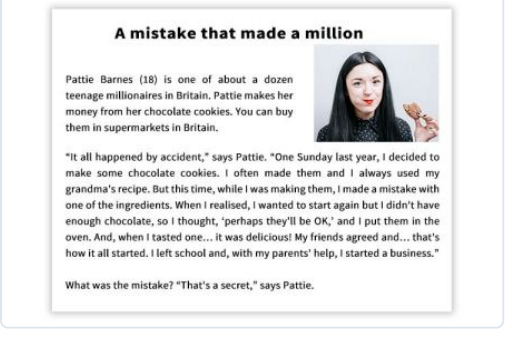

"It all happened by accident," says Pattie. "One Sunday last year, I decided to make some chocolate cookies. I often made them and I always used my grandma's recipe. But this time, while I was making them, I made a mistake with one of the ingredients. When I realised, I wanted to start again but I didn't have enough chocolate, so I thought, 'perhaps they'll be OK,' and I put them in the oven. And, when I tasted one... it was delicious! My friends agreed and... that's how it all started. I left school and, with my parents' help, I started a business."

What was the mistake? "That's a secret," says Pattie.

What do you know about Pattie?

- She is younger than all the other millionaires in Britain.
- She only sells her cookies on the internet.
- She makes lots of money from selling chocolate cookies. ✓
- She is the only teenage millionaire in Britain.
