Subject Dad's birthday

Hi Dave,

It's Dad's 50th birthday on the 31st. He knows you won't be here because you work abroad, but he's very disappointed.

Why don't we organise a video call on his birthday? I'll be at Mum and Dad's house for his birthday dinner. If we have the call at 7 pm London time — that's 1 pm for you in Chicago — can you be free? It'll be a wonderful surprise for Dad.

By the way, I wanted to buy him some new golf clubs for his birthday, but I didn't because they cost a lot, so why don't we buy them together — a present from both of us? Let me know if you agree.

A mistake that made a million

Pattie Barnes (18) is one of about a dozen teenage millionaires in Britain. Pattie makes her money from her chocolate cookies. You can buy them in supermarkets in Britain.

"It all happened by accident," says Pattie. "One Sunday last year, I decided to make some chocolate cookies. I often made them and I always used my grandma's recipe. But this time, while I was making them, I made a mistake with one of the ingredients. When I realised, I wanted to start again but I didn't have enough chocolate, so I thought, 'perhaps they'll be OK,' and I put them in the oven. And, when I tasted one... it was delicious! My friends agreed and... that's how it all started. I left school and, with my parents' help, I started a business."
